ABC Group Announces Joint Venture Agreement with China's Ningbo Inoac Huaxiang Automobile Products Co. Ltd.

Strengthens supply base for global platforms

Toronto, ON – April 5, 2011 - ABC Group Inc., today announced the signing of a joint venture agreement with Ningbo Inoac Huaxiang Automobile Products Co., Ltd (IHX) of China to form Ningbo ABC Inoac Huaxiang Co., Ltd. (AIH), based in Ningbo City, China.

As the automotive industry increasingly moves to global automotive platforms for design, engineering and production, automotive parts suppliers are adapting to meet these requirements. This joint venture strengthens market share for both ABC Group and IHX, as it further extends their ability to supply customers on a global basis, as well as supporting growth in the Chinese automotive market.

“ABC Group’s expanded presence in China is an important part of our global growth plan,” said Helga Schmidt, Chairman of ABC Group. “Global platforms have increasingly become the standard for the automotive industry,” added Mark Poynton, Co-Managing Director. “As ABC Group continues to grow, it will continue to expand its capacity to ensure our customers’ global platform requirements are met.”

“Since 2002, IHX has been committed to supporting the growing automobile industry in China. Our joint venture agreement with ABC Group will help to broaden both our product offering and our customer base,” said Ken Miwa, Chairman of Ningbo Inoac Huaxiang Automobile Products Co., Ltd (IHX).

The customer base at the AIH joint-venture facility will include Volkswagen, Toyota, Nissan and Daimler, with short-term plans to introduce North America’s Original Equipment Manufacturers (OEM’s). The following product lines will be produced at the joint-venture facility: interior, exterior and engine support products. In addition, ABC Group will be introducing its innovative blow and injection molding and its system-based manufacturing expertise into AIH.
